	10/5/2022	~The Balanced Teaching Approach with Challenging and Disruptive Students (K-12) Presented by Kevin Dill Students who are chronically disruptive are more than complicated, they are complex. As teachers, we quickly become frustrated, annoyed, confused, and exhausted when working with maladaptive students. We often fall into the trap of "spraying and praying" - attempting to "spray" countless strategies at the behavior and "praying" that one of the strategies works! Doing this often throws us off-balance in our approach as we either overreact or underreact to irresponsible behavior. In this training, we'll explore the Balanced Teaching Approach, which helps us to remain firm - yet flexible, as we navigate through the behavioral tactics and traps that maladaptive students often use to throw us off balance.	$150

Dr. Jenna Rufo will provide co-teaching support & inclusion training ideas for you and your schools! We look forward to a resource packed day filled with strategies to help all students succeed. This will be a recorded conference that will be sent to you at 7:30 AM on October 6th to view at your convenience!	$150
NOV	11/8/2022	~How to Set Effective Limits Using Choice Language Approach with Challenging and Disruptive Students(K-12) Presented by Kevin Dill One of the most effective strategies for addressing irresponsible and disruptive behavior is setting limits in the moment when behavior is occurring. Most teachers understand that limits need to be set, but we often struggle with what limits to set and how to set these limits effectively. In this training, we'll explore the strategy of using Choice Language Therapy to help us set more effective limits when behavior is occurring. We'll learn how to build a progressive set of limits and the precise language to use and not to use, when setting limits.	$150
	11/9/2022	*Teaching Writing is Hard, Until it Isn't Presented by Shannon Anderson While researching for her book, Be an Amazing Writing Teacher, Shannon learned the many reasons teachers feel ill-equipped to teach writing at the elementary level and offers challenges for upping your writing methods.
